

Letters From Readers

Dear President,

Please, accept my best congratulations on the splendid issue of the Journal of the Assyrian Academic Society. I deem it an honor to have contributed to it and I wish the editorial staff to carry on with enthusiasm the work so well begun.

The Oriental Institute of Naples will publish soon a collection of Assyrian texts from the Soviet Union (1932-1937) as yet unknown in the Western world with a glossary of mine ....

with best wishes and blessing,
Fabrizio A. Pennacchietti
Professor of Semitic Languages
Oriental Institute/University of Turin, Italy.

Dear Edward,

Thanks very much for the copy of the Journal. Congratulations on this new enterprise. I surprised myself by being able to read right off, and enjoy, Yousip Canon's story. Kateeny (of William Daniel) is much harder, but I am sure I will enjoy working through it. The other articles are also interesting and useful. It was especially good idea to publish two transcription of the Zmiryata-d-Rawe ...

All the best
Robert Hoberman, Professor
State University of New York, Stony Brook.

Dear Dr. Odisho,

Congratulations on the Journal of the Assyrian Academic Society. I am grateful for the copy you sent me. With this first issue, I hope those interested will be impressed by the quality of the Work done and the need to do a great deal more

...

I will be very happy to contribute to future issues if you think it proper....

Best regards and many thanks,
Solomon Sara, S.J.
Professor of Linguistics

Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.

Dear Professor Odisho,

I have received your Journal and thank you very much. I welcome the founding of the Assyrian Academic Society and the appearance of the first issue of its Journal which contains very interesting works. I shall be pleased to support the Society and contribute to its Journal.

Professor Knostantin Tsereteli
Tbilisi, U.S.S.R.

Professor Tsereteli is a native of the Republic of Georgia who speaks Assyrian fluently. He is the most renowned author in the field of Modern Assyrian. He has written tens of books and hundreds of research articles. [editor]